Bailey at the annual banquet of Group I. Pennsylvania tankers' Association, to-night. Mr. Bailey said that the tendency is to teach the people to look to the government for support, instead of teaching them to support the government. He deplored the extravagances of the national, state and municipal governments and urged his hearers to drive out both the bosses and the demagogues. He added:

For years the presence and power of the boss deterred you from that partici-pation in politics which every good citizen ought to take, and now that the boss is disappearing the demagogue drives you from your proper place in the councils of your party and your state.
